Over the past decade, 200 million people on average were affected by natural disasters every year.

We built 120 emergency shelters, 294 new homes and one children's home, helping families start over after a disaster.

58 health care facilities were built or restored, ensuring better access to medical services. 173,573 pre- and post-natal care examinations for pregnant women were conducted in health clinics we support, ensuring a safe pregnancy and delivery for mothers and a healthy start for babies.

Every year, nearly seven million children under five years of age die from diseases, malnutrition or lack of hygiene.

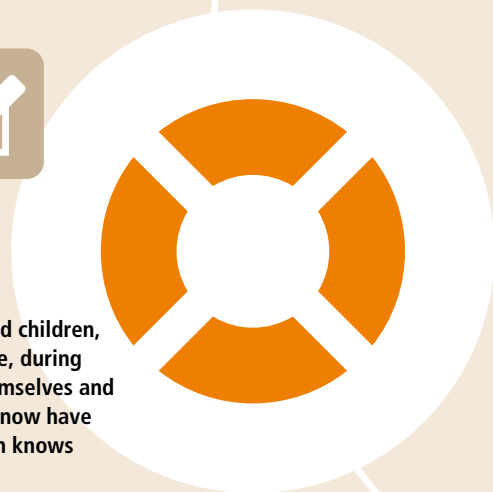

We protected 6,498 newborn babies and infants from malnutrition and undernourishment with therapeutic foods enriched with important vitamins and minerals.

Our impact, thanks to your support:

323 disaster preparedness trainings showed children, teenagers and adults how to behave before, during and after a disaster in order to protect themselves and help others. 140 villages and communities now have disaster management plans, the population knows exactly how to react during an emergency.

7,867

7,867 people participated in professional trainings and educational sessions, using this new knowledge to improve their income or to further their careers.

More than 700 million people lack access to clean drinking water.

358,301 people now have a daily source of clean drinking water.

358,301

4,646

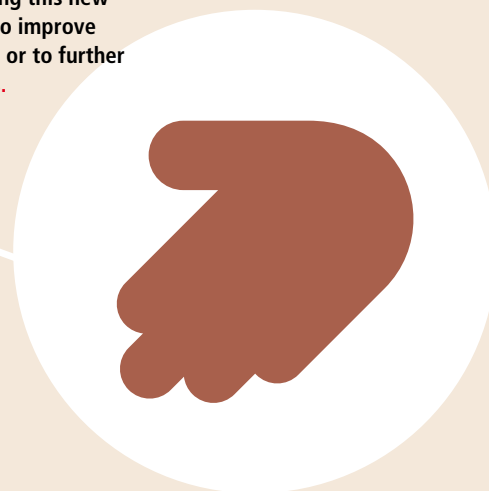

2.5 billion people live without proper sanitation worldwide.

4,646 new latrines provide basic sanitation for about 95,000 people in their households, schools and health centers.

11,765

11,765 families improved their living conditions, their nutrition and/or their income by farming, growing fruits and vegetables, raising livestock, or through cash-for-work programs.

329,997

Through awareness campaigns, 329,997 people were informed about the importance of handwashing and regular hygiene in order to lead a healthy life.
